ORGANIC (O) - CERTIFIED BIODYNAMIC VINEYARD (CBV)

«Certified Organic» wines must meet criteria in both farming and production. At its core, the organic program is about the protection of natural resources, to promote biodiversity and limit the use of synthetic products, especially in the vineyards.

Once the vinification process begins, substances like commercial yeast must also be certified as organic. Naturally occurring sulfites are permitted, but sulfite additives are not allowed. This is just a small sample of protocol. Additionally, certification is an arduous, three-year process during which producers have to transition vineyards by discontinuing any use of prohibited substances.

Biodynamics is the next step beyond organics. Based on Rudolf Steiner's ideology, biodynamics views the entire estate as a living organism. Naturally occurring cycles like moon phases dictate when to harvest, and there's even a calendar for optimal wine-tasting days.

Special concoctions of herbs, minerals and manure may also be planted in the soil to aid fertilization. une étape supérieure vis-à-vis de l'agriculture biologique.

NATURAL WINE (NW)

Natural Wine : is wine made with minimal chemical and technological intervention, both in growing grapes and making them into wine. The term is used to distinguish such wine from organic wine and biodynamic wine because of differences in cellar practices. All natural wines are, however, farmed organically at a minimum and many growers are biodynamic in the vineyard as well.

SUSTAINABLE FARMING

SUSTAINABLE FARMING (SF) : Sustainability encompasses the same environmental concerns as organic and biodynamic practices, but it also accounts for the winery's role in the community. Under this umbrella, there are multiple certifications, but each has a slightly different emphasis and methodology. However, most conduct annual self-assessments and are audited regularly by a neutral third party.

KOSHER WINE (KW)

Kosher Wine: is grape wine produced according to Judaism' s religious law, specifically, Jewish dietary laws.

To be considered kosher, Sabbath-observant Jews must supervise and sometimes handle the entire winemaking process, from the time the grapes are crushed until the wine is bottled and any ingredients used, including finings, must be kosher. When kosher wine is produced, marketed and sold commercially, it would normally have a hechsher («seal of approval») of a kosher certification agency.

Association
nationale pour

Haute Valeur
Environnementale

High environmental value (HEV) corresponds to the highest level of a more general scheme of environmental certification for farms. The farm environmental certification is a voluntary approach which aims to identify and promote particularly environmentally-friendly practices applied by farmers. HEV covers four key areas: biodiversity conservation, plant protection strategy, management of fertiliser use and management of water.

In order to engage the whole agricultural sector in an approach focused on environmental progress, it is designed on the basis of certification of the whole farm at three levels.

The VOSS source sits in Iveland, a sparsely populated area on the southern tip of Norway. Confined in an aquifer deep beneath the earth, VOSS water lies under layers of rock and sand, which create a natural filter, protecting it from the air and other pollutants. The exceptional purity of VOSS, and its uniquely fresh, clean taste, are due in part to the unusually low levels of Total Dissolved Solids (TDS) naturally occurring in the VOSS source.
